Fourteen hundred dollars were the proceeds from the experiment, and then with partly temporary machinery. The officials were all smiles yesterday. Capt. Hocheder was directing the sinking of a shaft 200 feet deep on a vein of quartz 7 feet wide. When he reaches 200 feet he will drift and then remove all the quarts to within 5 or 6 feet of the surface, which will fur-nish quartz enough to run the mill a year. On Monday as a bucket of quartz was landed a piece of free gold, valued at $11, was found in it adhering to a piece of rock. The impression is that the deeper the shaft the richer the quarts. In about two or three weeks he mill will start again.—Rockville, Md., Sentinel.
